

“Fantastic.”

David Osland
Vice Principal
Fort Street High School

Requirements

As one of Sydney's elite select entry schools, Fort Street High School was very keen to ensure that the school's reputation was embodied in the functionality and design of their website. The schools' national reputation for leadership in education and extra curricula activities was not going to be taken for granted!

Crucial support also came from the Parents & Citizens and Alumni associations who were keen to support the project and also increase their engagement with the school.

The Principal (Ros Moxham) and Vice Principal (David Osland) were mindful of not only securing support from key school community stakeholders, but also ensuring that the school conformed with government online, accessibility and security standards. There would be no compromising on the website's goals, timing or functionality.

SitEducate' Solution

Working with visionary and technically competent school leadership would prove to be both enormously rewarding and challenging. Ros Moxham and David Osland both recognised from the outset the potential of engaging the wider school community via the web. They understood the communication and cost saving potential of online technology.

The SitEducate platform would not only have to perform very well as a school website, but it would also need to function as a secure student portal. Every student would need to be able to securely login to access personalised education content. Teachers would not be forced to utilise this new online medium but rather encouraged to experiment and trial the very intuitive and yet powerful SitEducate system.

External associations would also be granted access to update and maintain their own sub-portals. This meant groups such as the Parent & Citizens association would have controlled access to a separate section of the website from which they could engage with their members.
